Japan's Foreign Affairs Minister visits Gallaudet

"I have long wanted to visit Gallaudet," commented Yoshio Sakurauchi, Japan's Minister of Foreign Affairs, as he renewed an old friendship with President Edward C. Merrill, Jr., met with faculty, staff and students and toured Kendall Green on Sunday, March 21.

Arriving on campus just after runners in the D.C. marathon had sprinted down Florida Avenue in front of the College, Mr. Sakurauchi and his entourage—including Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Mr. Yanagiya, Japanese journalists, Embassy officials and State Department security personnel—were greeted by President and Mrs. Merrill and Vice President for Academic Affairs John Schuchman at the E.M.G. Residence.

President Merrill and Mr. Sakurauchi had met several times in the past: in 1975, 1978 and most recently last summer when Merrill visited Japan to participate in a conference at the University of Tsukuba. At that time, Mr. Sakurauchi was secretary-general of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

After initial greetings, the group took off for the Learning Center, where they met SBG President Mike Ubowski and a group of students. Sakurauchi told the students that he was promoting the

GCRC Awards Night held

"If we keep this up, we'll soon be competing with the Academy Awards," quipped Gallaudet Community Relations Council Chairman George Boyd. The occasion was the third annual Awards and Recognition Program of the GCRC held at the Model Secondary School for the Deaf Auditorium on Saturday evening, March 20.

About 280 members of the community gathered to watch the presentation of close to 30 awards received by organizations and individuals who had made significant contributions to improvement of the quality of life in our community.

The theme selected by the GCRC for the evening was "Positive Community Relations Is Good Business for Everyone," but a simpler and catchier theme surfaced in the opening remarks of Gallaudet President Edward C. Merrill, Jr. and was echoed throughout the program by entertainers, presenters and other participants. "There is gold in the Near Northeast," Merrill said, "in the people." He complimented GCRC Chairman Boyd, Gallaudet's Equal Opportunity and Community Relations Officer La Varne Hines, and the members of the GCRC, who had recognized all of that gold and become "real modern-day goldminers."

Cynthia Saltzman was mistress of ceremonies for the event; and entertainment was provided by Bernard Bragg of Gallaudet's Theatre Arts

"Spirit of meanness" pervades America, says Rowan

Journalist and columnist Carl Rowan, who was the third speaker in Gallaudet's Lincoln Lectureship Series on Liberty and Equality March 22, has a favorite story about President Abraham Lincoln which goes something like this:

One day, Lincoln and Herndon were driving down a muddy road, arguing if there were really such a thing as an unselfish person. Herndon said yes; Lincoln said no. Passing a pig with its head stuck in a rail fence, Lincoln stopped the carriage, got out and freed the pig. When he got back in the carriage, Herndon chided him, saying "You silly man, you just proved my side of the argument. That was an unselfish act. And anyway, the pig might soon have freed itself." To which Lincoln replied: "Yes, that pig may have freed itself five minutes from now, but I wouldn't have known it. That pig would have been screaming in my dreams."

Rowan used the anecdote to illustrate that "everything we do comes back to help us" and that the concept of selflessness, exemplified in the past by political figures such as Lincoln, Kennedy and others, is being crowded out today by a "spirit of meanness" that pervades American.

Noting that Lincoln had said that those who deny freedom to others should not have it themselves, Rowan said that some presidents in the past, even during Rowan's days in Washington, have stood up to the challenge exemplified by Lincoln and have known what they had to do. He spoke of Kennedy's protests when he saw a "lily white" Coast Guard unit; his invitation to blacks to attend his first state dinner, which helped open the Washington social scene to blacks. He spoke of Lyndon Johnson's efforts to pass the Public Accommodation Act that "took a measure of insult off the heads of black Americans."

Today, however, the smart morality is "do unto others before they do unto you," and political leadership plays a key role in this attitude, said Rowan. Nixon people led Americans to believe, for example, that most welfare recipients are "big fat black women with 10 kids living in the Waldorf Astoria."

In reality, said Rowan, eight million children are on welfare, most of them white. Most food stamp recipients are white, too. In response to a question about whether foreign aid could be considered welfare, Rowan replied yes, and said also that many of the corporations of America receive welfare one way or another.

Rowan also had some harsh words to say about President Reagan, who "sold Americans a pig's poke of para-

Colloquium set

The Gallaudet Research Institute and the Graduate School will co-sponsor a colloquium on Friday, April 2 at 1:30 p.m. in room LN 11 of the Learning Center.

Dr. Richard Winefield of Cambridge, MA will be discussing "The Rivalry of Alexander Graham Bell and Edward Miner Gallaudet: Attitudes Towards Disability in the Nineteenth Century." Winefield's presentation will be based on his dissertation research at Harvard University.

Everyone is welcome to attend.

establishment of a junior college for visually and orally impaired students in Japan, that could be affiliated with the University of Tsukuba. He noted that deaf students at that university (there are nine) take the same courses as other students.

After a brief tour of the Learning Center conducted by David McGuinness, the group went to the President's office where Mr. Sakurauchi met Merv Garretson, special assistant to the president; Ausma Smits of the History Department; Frank Zieziula of the Counseling Department; Jack Gannon, director of the Alumni and Public Relations Office; Chuzo Okuda of the Mathematics Department; and Yerker Andersson, assistant to the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

"I feel the need for exchange between Japan and the United States in the Education of hearing disabled people," Mr. Sakurauchi told the group. Zieziula, who was also in Japan last summer to participate in an IBM conference on deafness, told Mr. Sakurauchi that we were pleased that the top teacher in education in Japan, Mr. Ogawa, will be visiting Gallaudet next month.

Mr. Sakurauchi also said he was very honored that the president of the College was showing him around the Institution and that "in spite of the fact that this is Sunday, many people got together to meet us." He presented the College with several gifts, including a Japanese doll made of china.

President Merrill told the group that Mr. Sakurauchi has two major interests—handicapped people and Boy Scouts. He has served as honorary chairperson of the International Congress of Educators of the Deaf. Mr. Sakurauchi comes from a political family: his father was a major force in the prewar Rikken Minseito (Constitutional People's Party), serving in such key posts as Commerce and Industry Minister and as Finance Minister. Mr. Sakurauchi, who has also served in many government positions, is the only person in Japan to serve as secretary-general of the Liberal Democratic Party under two different prime ministers.

From the President's Office, the group drove past Kendall School and then visited MSSD, where they were greeted by Rich Pelletier and introduced to students from the leadership program. After touring MSSD, Merrill hosted the group at a luncheon at the Cosmos Club.

While in Washington, Mr. Sakurauchi also met with President Reagan and other top government officials.

Role expectations for paraprofessionals

Madan Vasishta, a doctoral student at Gallaudet, is conducting a study on the role expectations of teacher aides in the education of hearing impaired students.

The study involves administering a specially developed questionnaire to a sample of paraprofessionals working with various programs serving hearing impaired children, teacher trainees, cooperating teachers, college supervisors and program supervisors.

From reviewing relevant literature, Vasishta found that relatively no research work has been done to delineate the competencies and skills that such a paraprofessional should possess. It is expected that findings from the study can be used for curriculum planning and program design for paraprofessional training.

Weekly Program Highlight

As part of their commitment to support and maintain excellence in science, the National Foundation announces a program entitled "Visiting Professorships for Women in Science and Engineering." Through this program the Foundation hopes to increase awareness of the capabilities of women scientists and engineers as full participants in the Nation's scientific effort.

The objectives of the program are to develop and encourage careers in research for women in science and engineering and provide greater visibility for women scientists and engineers employed in industry and government or in academic research. In Fiscal Year 1982, $500,000 has been allocated to the program; eight to 12 awards are expected. The usual award will be for 12 months.

Women who hold doctorates in science or engineering fields and who have independent research experience in academic, industrial or public sectors may apply. Applicants should not be currently affiliated with the host institution nor have been offered a regular position by the host institution at the time of award.

For more information, Gallaudet faculty and staff may contact the National Science Foundation, Coordinator for Women in Science, Washington, DC, (202) 357-7734.

President's Office Notes

The Gallaudet College Board of Trustees held its second annual retreat and business meeting here from Wednesday evening, March 17, through Friday, March 19.

On Wednesday evening, the Board heard from Joan Herschede, chairperson of the Board of the University of Cincinnati Foundation. With her to help answer questions was Thurman Owens, executive director of the Foundation. In 1980, the University of Cincinnati Foundation initiated a $43.1 million capital campaign. To date, 55% of the campaign goal has been reached. The Foundation officers are particularly proud of the extent of support demonstrated by faculty and staff at the University, as their goal of $1 million has been surpassed.

On Thursday, Vice President for Institutional Advancement Barbara Harslem, members of her staff and Special Assistant to the President for Advocacy Merv Garretson made presentations to the Board and answered questions about activities in which they are involved, including external relations, community relations, the budget process, alumni relations, public relations and advocacy. Specific examples of their work were given, such as the efforts to acquire the new Northwest Campus, the recent survey of alumni and preparation of the OMB and congressional budgets. The presentations were planned to demonstrate how the various areas of institutional advancement work together and to show the involvement of each member of the team in all of the key areas.

On Friday, March 19, the Board met in committees during the morning. In the afternoon, the regular business meeting was held and two important proposals were approved. The concept plan for the Northwest Campus, outlining a School of Preparatory Studies, was accepted by the Board and will be further refined by a planning team of members of the faculty and administration of the College. The Board approved the establishment of a Gallaudet Educational Foundation as a vehicle for accelerating efforts to obtain funding from the private sector.

The report of the chair, Committee on Resources of the Board, on the Graduate Fellowship Fund was approved. Items of business reported out of this same committee and approved by the Board included cancellation of the operating policy 8:01:00, Physical Plant Operations and Services, and increases in international student tuition and special graduate fees. A limitation on admissions of international students was approved, along with changes in the MSSD and KDES admissions policies.

Sabbatical leave requests for Pre-College faculty were approved as follows: Margaret Worthington, August 1982-August 1983 and Arsena Strange, August 1982-August 1983. Fourteen members of the College faculty were granted sabbatical leave for varying periods. They are Carol Garretson, Walter Trafton, Trenton Batson, Margaret Walworth, Jeanne Conway, Gary Seifert, Rosalie Robinette, Susan Anthony, Robert Williams, John Delaney, Carole Frankel, William McCrone, Carol LaSasso and Edmond Skinski. Kathryn Meadow, from the Division of Research, was granted a sabbatical leave for the 1982-83 academic year.

Nominees for the MSSD Advisory Committee were approved as follows: Bettye Morton, Peyton Williams, Dr. Steven K. Chough, Dr. Madeline Hunter, Dr. Ronald Anderson, Dr. Edna Adler, Dr. Arthur Boothroyd and Joseph Kennedy.

Three outstanding candidates were chosen by the Trustees to receive honorary degrees at the 1982 Commencement ceremonies on May 17.

Five members of the Board of Trustees were reappointed for three year terms. They are Katie M. Brown, Thomas P. McLachlen, George E. Muth, Gustave H. Rathe, Jr. and Frank B. Sullivan. The current officers were re-elected. Serving in their respective offices for a new term are George E. Muth, chairman; Bradshaw Mintener, vice chairman; Wilson Grabill, secretary; and Philip Sprinkle, treasurer.

But Reaganomics is not working and has devastated millions of people: "When you've got the soup lines and cheese lines that weren't there before, that's news." He pointed out that two million people have lost their jobs since last July, representing a $50-60 billion addition to our national deficit. The press also came in for its share of the blame for taking too long to see what was happening with Reaganomics.

The poverty problems in our country could be solved "if we didn't have the hard-nosed Horatio Alger attitude" that anyone can make it if they put out enough effort, said Rowan. "Sure, I grew up in poverty. It's no secret. I found out how it destroys dreams and puts in desperate straits people who are not extremely lucky. . . I know how lucky I've been."

Saying that Americans have begun to wake up again to the lesson of Lincoln—that when we are unselfish we are helping ourselves—Rowan predicted that we are going to go through a fight in the next few years "and we'll

Workshops on deaf students held

Three out of nine scheduled regional workshops on "The Deaf Student in College," sponsored by Gallaudet's National Academy, were held in January and March.

The intensive one and a half day programs, designed to increase awareness of the special needs of deaf college students and promote strategies for more effective mainstreaming, are being made possible through the support of the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

The first in the series was held at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Jan. 22 and 23. The second workshop was held at the University of Arizona, Tucson, March 1 and 2. The third was held at Pennsylvania State University, University Park Campus, on March 13 and 14. Others in the series will be held through June.

The workshops were attended by representatives from colleges and universities in the areas, student union directors, admissions counselors, student government representatives, student special service coordinators and many representatives of the deaf community.

The series of workshops has been endorsed by the Association of College Unions International as well as several other educational organizations.

Annette Posel of WGBH Caption Center was the keynote speaker at the Massachusetts workshop.

Hosts needed for AFS students at MSSD

MSSD hosts foreign students through the American Field Service (AFS), a program of international/intercultural foreign exchange, with an emphasis on family living. This year, two deaf students, one from Belgium and one from Sweden, are participating in MSSD's academic and residential programs through AFS. They are learning about the American culture, including deaf culture and are also sharing their cultures with MSSD.

The program is now looking for persons interested in hosting a foreign student for a year, from August, 1982 through July, 1983.

MSSD provides room and board to the student during school weeks, and the host family provides room and board during all closed weekend/vacation periods.

The foreign student received a minimal monthly stipend from AFS of approximately $20 for personal necessities. Host families may deduct, as a charitable contribution, up to $50 per month during the time the student lives with them.

Persons interested in hosting a foreign student can call Nancy Andersson at x5951 and ask for a brochure entitled "AFS: We're Bringing the World a Little Closer to Home," and an application.

MSSD senior Joe Stevens gets ready to take off in his father's Cessna 172 four-seater airplane from College Park, MD. His brother flew the plane up from South Norfolk Airport to pick him up for the weekend.

MSSD senior is youngest deaf pilot

by Pattie Cinelli

Joe Stevens, an 18-year-old senior at the Model Secondary School for the Deaf, received his private pilot's license last Dec. 31, making him the youngest known deaf person ever to receive a license.

Stevens lost his hearing at the age of five when he contracted meningitis. Because of his profound deafness, he is not permitted to fly in radio-controlled airports except during an emergency. "Since I can't use the radio, I use my eyes to fly," he explained. He said he spent two years studying for the aviation exam.

Stevens' interest in aviation is inherited. His father, Alston, is a manager of the South Norfolk Airport and also owns a flight instruction school and airplane rental business there. While attending school in Norfolk and during the summers, Stevens worked with his father as a mechanic, repairing and overhauling planes. He first started flying when he was 12 years old and had his first solo flight when he was 16. Three of his four brothers, who are all hearing, have their pilot's licenses, and the fourth has a student license.

According to his father, Joe Stevens took possession of one of the family's planes—a two-seater 1945 J3 Piper Cub—which is kept at the Norfolk airport. Since the Piper had no radio, he said it naturally should belong to him, and his father agreed. Stevens did almost all the maintenance and repair on the plane even before he got his license. Since moving to D.C., he often has one of his brothers fly to the College Park, MD airport to pick him up for weekend flights back to Norfolk.

Stevens came to MSSD in the fall of 1980 as a transfer student from Maury Public High School in Norfolk. He said he plans to attend Gallaudet College next year and wants to study electronics or engineering. He is now in advanced social studies and English classes and this semester is studying courses in subjects such as career development, geometry and communication.

Stevens also has a part in the MSSD spring production of "Fiddler on the Roof" for which he has grown a beard. Last year he participated in the play "You Can't Take It With You."

No day care

The Day Care Committee, on the advice of Central Administration, regrets to inform the students, faculty and staff on Kendall Green that due to budget constraints, implementation of the proposed day care program has been suspended.

The committee wishes to thank everyone who expressed interest in the program and those who contributed support to the development of the implementation plan. In the event that the proposal is reconsidered at some future date, an announcement will appear in On the Green.

Stop!

The campus police in the Department of Safety and Security are giving special attention these days to stop sign violators. They're especially on the lookout for people doing the "California Roll," the practice of slowing down for stop signs but without really stopping, then continuing on through the intersection.

"In effect," said Charles Jones, who spearheads the department's parking and traffic enforcement efforts, "Some people treat stop signs like yield signs. Drivers are required to come to a full and complete stop at a stop sign. Anything less can result in the driver being cited for passing a stop sign."

And, if that happens, be prepared for a $20 fine.
